Fast, 3D isotropic imaging of whole mouse brain using multi-angle-resolved subvoxel SPIM

Jun Nie¹⁺, Sa Liu¹⁺, Tingting Yu²⁺, Yusha Li², Junyu Ping¹, Fang Zhao¹, Yujie

Huang³, Wei Mei³, Shaoqun Zeng², Dan Zhu^{2*} and Peng Fei^{1,2*}

¹ School of Optical and Electronic Information, Huazhong University of Science and Technology, Wuhan, 430074, China.

² Britton Chance Center for Biomedical Photonics, Wuhan National Laboratory for Optoelectronics, Huazhong University of Science and Technology, Wuhan, 430074, China.

³ Department of Anesthesiology, Tongji Hospital, Tongji Medical College, Huazhong University of Science and Technology, Wuhan, 430030, China

This manuscript has been withdrawn by the authors because some descriptions of other techniques (line 47-50) in the current version of manuscript are inaccurate. Therefore, the authors request that this version of the manuscript is not cited as reference for the project. Please contact the corresponding author if you have any questions.